Introduction

This is the first edition of Alternatives to “In-Person” Consultations.

It is guidance as required by Title 5, California Code of Regulations, Section 55255(c), “District Services,” adopted by the Board of Governors of the California Community Colleges in May 2008.

This guidance is a result of consultation with, and relies primarily on the advice and judgment of, the Statewide Academic Senate for the California Community Colleges.

Other statewide and regional representative groups were provided opportunities for comment and input.

It is intended to be effective immediately and should be employed as appropriate in each community college district.

Background on Purpose of Consultation with Employers

The requirement of “in-person” consultations originated in December 1969 when the California Community Colleges Board of Governors initially authorized Cooperative Work Experience Education through the adoption of Title 5 regulations. In that set of Title 5 regulations, section 54025 (subsequently repeatedly amended and renumbered in 1974, 1978, 1983, 1992 and 1998), required community college districts to perform, among other elements, “on-the-job observations of the student.”

In the ensuing years, in response to inquiries to the System Office, Legal Affairs has affirmed that the term “in-person” means “in the presence of.” Legal Affairs also noted that, because telephonic devices existed at the time of the original regulation adoption, the specific requirement could not be met through any alternatives, and the regulation drafters indeed intended “In-person” consultations.

Almost 40 years after the original deliberations regarding California Community Colleges Cooperative Work Experience Education, the workplace and circumstances of work have changed markedly. In response to suggestions by practitioners in the field, the issue of “In-person” consultations has been revisited by the California Community Colleges Board of Governors. The Board has passed regulations that will allow districts to authorize alternatives to the in-person visit under limited circumstances, to be defined in guidelines adopted by the California Community College System Office. The specific new regulation is provided elsewhere in this publication.

Many valuable outcomes do accrue from In-person consultations with employers.

Some benefits would include, but not be limited to:

- Develop relationships with employers
- Inform supervisors about programs
- Refine, affirm, evaluate learning objectives
- Explain the evaluation process
- Improve dialogue between instructors and supervisors
- Facilitate dialogue between students and supervisors to reinforce learning experience
- Support student success
- Educate faculty about latest trends in industry

- Support changes to improve programs
- Ensure site safety and legitimacy, within the reasonable expertise of instructors and/or coordinators*
- Strengthen relationships with students
- Market/expand programs
- Create credibility for Work Experience

When a college district permits enrollment in an unpaid CWEE with an employer, whether for a general work-based learning experience or an internship practicum, the district personnel responsible for the arrangement are expected to exercise reasonable judgment in determining both the legitimacy of the worksite and that the worksite supervisor ensures the safety of the worksite (provides reasonable assurance.) The district’s prior experience with the employer, the employer’s history and reputation in the community and the type of work involved are criteria that district personnel can use in make such a determination. The employer, the district and the student share responsibility in determining whether the student’s experience and training are adequate for the volunteer placement. A memorandum of agreement between the district and the employer, in which the employer affirms compliance with pertinent laws and regulations, along with the student’s developmentally appropriate, specific and measurable learning objectives, recommended and approved by the employer and district faculty, are further assurance that the student’s learning experience will be safe and meaningful.

When a district substitutes approved alternatives to in person consultations in limited circumstances, the expectation remains that professional judgment will ensure that the benefits listed above are not materially diminished. A college’s stewardship in assisting student develop and thrive is not to be changed when utilizing alternative methods of oversight.

 Instructors and /or coordinators are not expected to be authorities concerning federal or state Occupational Safety & Health Administration or Department of Labor laws, regulations or practices, or other applicable compliance mandates; they merely must conform to all “required reporter” mandates and are expected to exercise reasonable prudence in assessing work situations.*

Types of Limited Circumstances Under Which a District Might Permit an Alternative to an “In-Person” Visit

The fact that the workplace is undergoing a multi-faceted revolution has been noted by many. For example, the RAND Corporation, in their publication “The 21st Century at Work: Forces Shaping the Future Workforce and Workplace in the United States,” prepared for the U.S. Department of Labor in 2004, traced out the variety of influences and outcomes which can be expected through an ongoing upheaval in the nature of work.

Cooperative Work Experience Education can likewise be expected to be shaped by these forces and will need to rely in increasing measure on the professional judgment of instructors and/or program coordinators. To that end, regulatory change permitting more flexibility in the supervision of Cooperative Work Experience Education has occurred.

Several limited circumstances occur when districts might reasonably permit an alternative to an “In-person” visit.

The most common circumstances include the following:

- The worksite is hosted by a reliable entity with a strong track record. Cooperative Work Experience Education benefits from employers who actively support student work experience and establish long term relationships with colleges. When such robust work experience education opportunities are available, little benefit occurs from constant “In-person” consultation, and employers appreciate their trusted partnerships with colleges.
- The student and supervisor are repeating Work Experience – they know about the program and instructors know them. Again, when the circumstances of the work experience education are well understood by the instructor and/or coordinator, little benefit may accrue from additional in-person contact.

Other Limited Circumstances may occur when Districts Might Reasonably Permit an Alternative to an "In-person" Visit.

- Emergency and security of instructor, supervisor, or student. Under certain rare circumstances, extraordinary conditions may occur which impair the ready ability for an in-person consultation, yet the quality of the work experience education is not compromised.
- Work hours of student or supervisor do not match the instructor's. In certain industries, shift work or irregular hours may create an unnecessary burden on the employer or the instructor/coordinator to meet the requirements of an "in-person" consultation. When the college uses due diligence to ensure that no material diminishment of the benefits of "in-person" consultation occurs, the college may choose alternatives for consultation.
- Student and supervisor are working in virtual offices. In certain situations – such as providing technical or business services in a territory – no actual fixed "work-site" may exist, and an alternative arrangement might be appropriate.
- Distance. In an increasing global workplace, distance may be a major complicating factor. Although provisions for distance work experience education are contained in Title 5, California Code of Regulations, section 55255(b), the need for nimble arrangements may preclude the exercise of other options. Hiring distant adjunct faculty for ad hoc work experience education may not be feasible. However, districts are expected to make reasonable permanent arrangements for distant locales, which are regularly used for work experience education, such as associated overseas satellites or other locations in which an ongoing presence can be anticipated.

Program coordinators must be mindful when approving out-of-state or out-of-country work locales that all insurance and liability issues are addressed.

Types of Alternatives to an “In-Person” Visit Which a District Might Permit

Just as records are required to be maintained regarding “consultations(s) in-person with the employer or designated representative,” [tit, 5, CCR, § 55256 (b)(1)] districts are required to document both the specific authorized alternative used in place of the in-person visit and the limited circumstances motivating its use.

Types of acceptable tools to use in lieu of an in-person visit include, but are not limited to:

- Phone
- Teleconference
- E-mail
- Partner with instructors from other colleges
- Videoconference
- Internet
- U.S. Postal Service

§ 55255. District Services.

(a) The district shall provide sufficient services for initiating and maintaining on-the-job learning stations, coordinating the program, and supervising students. The supervision of students shall be outlined in a learning agreement coordinated by the college district under a state-approved plan. The employer and the qualified Community College Instructor/Coordinator shall share responsibility for on-the-job supervision, which shall include but not be limited to:

- (1) Instructor/Coordinator consultation in person with employers or designated representatives to discuss students' educational growth on the job.
- (2) Written evaluation of students' progress in meeting planned on-the-job learning objectives.
- (3) Consultation with students in person to discuss students' educational growth on the job.

(b) The district shall provide the above services at least once each quarter or semester for each student enrolled in the Cooperative Work Experience Education. Qualified adjunct faculty may be hired from other institutions to develop the learning contracts and make the "in-person" consultation for a student that is out of a college's geographical region, state, or in another country. For legally indentured apprentices, the requirements of this section may be delegated to the Joint Apprenticeship Committee in order to avoid duplication of supervisory services. The responsibility for compliance with Education Code and title 5 Cooperative Work Experience Education requirements remains with the college.

(c) In certain limited situations that will be defined in guidelines issued by the Chancellor, the district may substitute approved alternatives to "in person" consultations. The guidelines will specify the types of alternatives which districts may approve and the circumstances under which they may be used. In establishing and maintaining guidelines on such alternatives, the Chancellor shall consult with, and rely primarily on the advice and judgment of, the statewide Academic Senate and shall provide a reasonable opportunity for comment by other statewide and regional representative groups.
