Introduction

Purpose

This document will serve as Mendocino College's first annual Institutional Effectiveness and Governance report. The purpose of this report is to provide the college community with a written summary of the college planning process and committee actions designed to fulfill our college mission. The report will inform our college's assessment of our institutional effectiveness and help assess our college governance and decision-making processes.

The report presents three important aspects reflecting our commitment to evaluating our planning and governance practices. The assessments include the following: 1) The assessing of goals and accomplishments of each of the seven Mendocino College 2015-2016 planning committees through planning committee goal reports; 2) Annual Survey of all 2015-2016 planning committee members; 3) Review of the annual (Fall 2015) strategic planning retreat from participant survey results.

Summary

2015-2016 Committees: Mendocino College has seven (7) established planning committees which provide the structure to the college planning and decision making process. The committees are:

1. Student Learning Outcomes Committee
2. Professional Development Committee
3. Educational Action Plan Committee
4. Outreach and Marketing Committee
5. Technology Committee
6. Staffing Committee
7. Facilities Committee

The seven (7) college planning committees identified thirty-four objectives for the 2015-2016 academic year. Of those objectives, 73% were successfully completed within the given timeframe with 27% of the objectives being carried over to the 2016-2017 academic year.

Fall 2015 Planning Retreat: Mendocino College has an annual strategic planning retreat, during which college employees from the three constituency groups and current students participate in an all day workshop in which the college mission, vision, values and goals are revisited and if need be, revised. In addition, participants assess and are surveyed regarding our planning and governance processes.

2015-2016

During the Fall 2015 strategic planning retreat, nineteen (19) Mendocino College faculty, staff and students attended and fully engaged in discussing, assessing, and evaluating institutional decision-making and budget allocation processes. The group dialogued about the mission, vision, and board priorities. After some discussion, the group worked collaboratively to revise the institutional strategic goals and set broad parameters for developing strategic activities. While reflecting on the college planning process and engaging in a broad discussion of institutional goals, participants were given a discussion template about institutional processes, governance and overall institutional operations.

Following the Fall Strategic Planning Retreat, a post survey was administered, which measured the overall effectiveness of the retreat. The survey included opportunities to provide feedback on recommendations on improving the retreat, institutional processes and increasing constituent group participation. Overall, 100% of the participants indicated that they were satisfied with the retreat. A majority of participants, 67%, indicated that there was appropriate campus representation at the retreat. However, 33% indicated that there was not enough representation and provided feedback on how to broaden and diversify employee participation.

2015-2016 Committee Member Survey: Members of the 2015-2016 planning committees were surveyed regarding institutional planning and governance processes. Overall, 93% of committee members were satisfied with the 2015-2016 planning structure of the committees in which they participated. Concerning respondents' knowledge of the overall planning and budgeting process, 61% indicated that they felt they were familiar with the processes. However, 77% of respondents indicated that other college employees do not fully understand the planning and budgeting structure.

In an effort to improve institutional processes as well as governance, respondents suggested the following:

- More diverse employees, i.e., classified, part time faculty
- Perhaps it was the right group if we do the next step of getting a larger representation of college staff/students to work on objectives. But in addition to the student equity group; maybe more from Student Success.
- Would have been nice to have participation from more classified and management staff from various departments
- I thought there were fewer faculty than usual. Faculty leaders from curriculum, Basic Skills, etc. normally attend.
- Representation from the foundation (perhaps not scheduling the retreat the same weekend as the gala), perhaps a couple more students; faculty & administrators were well represented, but more would be welcome. Perhaps more trustees.
- To decrease general disgruntlement among faculty, processes need to be better described and decisions justified/explained

2015-2016

- I would like to have the opportunity to discuss areas of strength and areas of improvement. Also, decisions that are made about work flow often times affect areas not realized and these work flow decisions are made without input or explanation.
- The process for planning and budgeting is clear and has been implemented consistently.

2015-2016 Committee Member Survey Results

In addition to the 2015-2016 planning committee summary of accomplished goals and objectives, 2015-2016 planning committee members were surveyed regarding institutional processes and governance. Overall, 92% of committee members were satisfied with 2015-2016 planning structure of committees in which they participated. Concerning respondents' knowledge of the overall planning and budgeting process, 62% indicated that they felt they were familiar with the processes. However, 77% of respondents indicated that other college employees do not fully understand the planning and budgeting structure. The survey was structured with ACCJC guidelines regarding institutional planning which grouped questions in three major areas: Awareness, Development and Proficiency.

Awareness

Excluding respondents who indicated that they neither agreed or disagreed, 52% indicated that there is enough awareness on campus regarding how the planning and budget allocation process works, with the highest disagreement being on the sufficiency of dialogue and discussion regarding planning and processes (20% of respondents).

Development

Excluding respondents who indicated that they neither agreed nor disagreed, 82% indicated that the college follows proper protocol during its planning and implementation process, with the highest disagreement being that there is not enough constituency group representation (5% of respondents).

Proficiency

Excluding respondents who indicated that they neither agree nor disagreed, 82% indicated that there exists enough documentation of the planning and allocation processes, with the highest disagreement being that there is not enough quality information being presented regarding the budget and allocation process (5% of respondents).

In an effort to improve institutional processes as well as governance, respondents suggested the following:

- Have clear objectives for each committee and distribute that information prior to committee participation.
- Provide feedback to the college community regarding program review requests.
- Improve communication on campus regarding what decisions are being made and what is the constituency representation.
- Explain the responsibilities that committee members have when participating in planning committees.

I feel that the faculty are very busy with many duties and this leaves them little time to understand this very intricate part of the process. The budget is gone over often times very quickly and it is difficult for those of us without budgetary expertise to understand (though questions are answered when asked!) In general, I feel that there needs to be better communication at all levels considered.

The process for planning and budgeting is clear and has been implemented consistently.

To decrease general disgruntlement among faculty, processes need to be better described and decisions justified/explained

2015-2016

Analysis of Institutional Planning and Budget Allocation Processes

Concerning the college's institutional planning and budget allocation processes, 100% of the Fall 2015 strategic planning retreat participants were in agreement that the process adequately reflects the college's mission, vision and strategic goals. Of the seven (7) 2015-2016 planning committees, 73% of committee goals were successfully completed for the 2015-2016 academic year. However, 77% of 2015-2016 planning committee members indicated that college employees do not fully understand the planning and budgeting processes.

Moving Forward

Although Mendocino College now has an updatable electronic committee handbook, not all committees submit descriptions and goals in a timely manner. This, in turn, affects the accuracy of the committee handbook. A database is now available to filter and sort committees, constituency members and term expirations. However, only committee information that has been submitted will upload into the document. In addition, Mendocino College has recently purchased an integrated database platform, eLUMEN, which will house and map student learning outcomes, program review, and curriculum documents. There is a strong possibility that committee goals and descriptions can now be further automated with this new platform. Below are the outlined steps for the 2016-2017 academic year:

- Revision of committee handbook – consolidating committees and mapping committee responsibilities.
- Revisit annual presentation of institutional planning, budgeting and governance processes to all committees.
- Integrate accurate committee goals, descriptions and accomplishments in eLUMEN.
- Clarity on budgeting and planning processes through committee participant trainings.
- Possibility of presenting planning and budgeting structure during in-service.

2015-2016

Analysis of Institutional Governance

Concerning the college's Governance process, 67% of the Fall 2015 Strategic Planning Retreat respondents indicated that there was sufficient constituency group representation. However, 77% 2015-2016 committee member respondents indicated that they believe college employees do not fully understand the institutional processes, with 82% indicating that there needs to be more clarity on how the college adheres to the overall process. Also, retreat participants indicated that there is not enough clear information concerning committee responsibilities, which may impede constituency group representation. A committee handbook and participatory governance handbook would aid in addressing what is governance, how committees ensure constituency group representation, and how constituency groups affect the overall institutional planning and budgeting processes.

Moving Forward

Although Mendocino College now has an updatable electronic committee handbook, not all committees submit descriptions and goals in a timely manner. This, in turn, affects the accuracy of the committee handbook. Committee description and goals are all online, however, not all committees have active descriptions and goals. A database is now available to filter and sort committees, constituency members and term expirations. However, only committee information that has been submitted will upload into the document. In addition, Mendocino College has recently purchased an integrated database platform, eLUMEN, which will house and map student learning outcomes, program review, and curriculum documents. There is a strong possibility that committee goals and descriptions can now be further automated with this new platform. Below are the outlined steps for the 2016-2017 academic year:

- Annual revision of committee handbook – consolidating committees and mapping committee responsibilities as well as indicating what is governance.
- Improve communication on campus regarding what decisions are being made and what is the constituency representation.
- A district handbook on participatory governance – tied with the committee handbook.
- Explain how the planning and budgeting process affects each employee and how each employee contributes to the decision making process.
- Revisit annual presentation of institutional planning, budgeting and governance processes to all committees.
- Integrate committee goals, descriptions and accomplishments in eLUMEN.
